

Abstract

5 In a method for identification of a user, especially in the case of devices of process automation technology, at least one person-specific feature of the user is registered with a sensor and compared with stored features. In the case of match of the registered, person-specific feature with at least one of the stored features, device access is granted.

10 (Fig.

1)